<Subliminal>

by <Growing Desires>

Prologue

The world has undergone a massive sway of power in the last four years. America had their first female president, this was huge for them, a defining moment in history for sure but what happened next was seemingly too much of a coincidence. Many countries already had their first female leaders, some many years and decades prior, but as more elections came up, every country saw a change in power to a new female leader. Even countries that weren't democratic had adopted female successors. The whole world was now run by women, very powerful women.

The UN held a summit that brought all member states together and even surprisingly, non-member states. The whole female meeting was civil and very open and clear to the public what was going on but what they somehow managed to hide was the secret meeting that happened after dark. Behind closed doors and in a room shrouded in secrecy, there it was agreed that the women would retain power by any means possible, they enlisted the help of an extremely secret service from multiple countries, and they came up with their plan. Subliminal messaging. The idea was old but in recent years the capability to reach more people than ever through smart devices meant that it was finally at its true peak of power.

The lead scientist, Natalie Schwartz, had a sinister way to make sure that it would work, corpulence and unwavering infatuation. The men of the world would become fat, and the women of the world needed to be afflicted with it too for it to work. Men would want to grow, and women would want to feed and nurture and assume the dominant role over men. Despite some grumblings in the next secret meeting, they ultimately agreed. Natalie's work would go live and change the world forever.

That was approximately two years ago, and the world had been changed almost exactly as Natalie's theory had stated with a few caveats. Not everyone was affected, Men and women alike were just naturally immune to the subliminal messaging now broadcast from smart devices. It wasn't detected for some time but by the time they had noticed the difference it was already too late as the first problem they found was that there were those who were more susceptible to the changes than others. Natalie was one of these people.

During the work the team did, Natalie kept a lot of her secrets about the specific inner workings of the program, the other scientists were mostly out of the loop to Natalie's true plan. Natalie herself was no longer the same person she was since the messaging first broadcast; she had become a dedicated carer and feeder of multiple men who were close to crossing 1000lbs. Her gyaku harem was something she secretly desired before this whole thing took place, it only made sense that she would be afflicted in such an extreme way. For her, the rest of her life was sure to be heaven.

The plan still worked, men around the globe gained weight at varying rates but most men were now in a position where they wanted to gain weight, wanted to grow and be huge and fat. Most women found their desire for a larger man to change, suddenly the bigger the better was the name of the dating game. They'd shower men with love and affection as well as copious amounts of food, wanting to see them all grow larger and larger.

As elections drew around for some countries, they all remained female even if they changed from one to another. Women finally had rule over the world.
