LIQUID ASSETS

AN ADVENTURE FOR CHARACTERS OF 2ND TO 3RD LEVEL

LIQUID ASSETS IS A PATHFINDER SECOND EDITION adventure for three to five characters of 2nd to 3rd level, optimized for a party of four 2nd-level characters. The party has been asked to collect on a debt owed by a man named Grigori, the owner of a prominent public bath house. Naturally, Grigori is unenthusiastic about the expectation of repayment at this time, and so the party must find a way to bring Grigori around to their point of view. Failing that, perhaps they can steal the debt right out from under his nose. This adventure is set in Cartosia, but names of people and places can be changed to place the adventure in practically any other campaign world.

BACKGROUND

In the heart of a bustling neighborhood within the city of Dorran stands the familiar Whispering Streams Bathhouse. A sentinel of local tradition, this establishment has served as a comforting constant in the lives of community members for generations. Grigori, the stalwart owner who inherited the business from his father, has lovingly maintained this neighborhood cornerstone for nearly three decades. As the building has worn over the years, the nagging rehabilitation projects Grigori had been putting off became too prominent to ignore. Recognizing the urgent need for renewal, Grigori enlisted the services of a modest, two-man construction company called Flint Ridge Masonry to carry out the work.

With a handshake and the promise of the second half of the payment being delivered after completion of the work, the rehabilitation project began. Construction was completed on schedule, and Grigori was pleased to soon reopen his doors to the public. Yet, as the fresh coat of paint dried and the renovated rooms stood ready to embrace patrons once more, clouds of discontent began to gather. Grigori, upon inspection, voiced uncertain dissatisfaction with the outcome, criticizing what he perceived as shoddy craftsmanship that fell short of his vision. Their agreement was now disputed, as accusations of unmet standards replaced their earlier camaraderie.

The dispute simmered, unresolved, as conversations stalled and weeks turned into months, leaving the once enthusiastic craftsmen feeling slighted and aggrieved. Their requests for payment are met at best with silence and at worst with staunch refusal, as Grigori has remained steadfast in his criticism, holding his purse strings tightly closed. Frustrations have reached a boiling point, and both parties have claim to financial impacts. Desperate for a resolution that seems increasingly elusive, Flint Ridge Masonry is resorting to hired muscle to collect on what they are owed. Will the party finally be able to settle this frustrating stalemate?

GETTING THE QUEST

One way or another, the party has become aware that Lukas (CG he/him human miner with Crafting +6 instead of Mining Lore, Pathfinder GameMastery Guide) of Flint Ridge Masonry seeks the help of adventurers for a debt-collecting job. The party may have responded to a publicly posted notice, or one of the party members may be a friend or a friend-of-a-friend of Lukas or his son, Misha, who form the entirety of the company. The adventure begins when

- He and his son Misha performed significant renovation work for the Whispering Streams bathhouse three months ago.
- What started as a positive client-contractor relationship turned sour after the job was completed, as Grigori, the bathhouse's owner, did not provide prompt payment after the work was completed.
- Lukas was amenable to giving Grigori some time, but knew something wasn't right when Grigori was vague about when he would be able to provide payment.
- Eventually, Grigori began to ignore any attempts at contact. Lukas tried approaching the bathhouse himself, but Grigori's bodyguard forced him out.
- Grigori's bathhouse is staffed by two capable threatening bodyguards.
- Lukas figures the party should be able to handle the bodyguards if things get messy, but would very much prefer for no blood to be spilled. He certainly does not want Grigori dead; the potential involvement of the authorities would be ruinous for his business.
- Lukas knows Grigori keeps a small cache of coin somewhere within the bathhouse for emergencies. If Grigori claims he doesn't have the money to pay, he is lying.
- Lukas is owed a total of 400 gp, not including interest. Lukas is happy to take only the principal sum, at this point.

Lukas withholds the fact that Grigori believes the work is shoddy from the party. While part of him is confident in the quality of the job, another part of him is aware of the possibility that his son's inexperience led to some flaws and he is extremely reluctant to accept the possibility. A character who makes a successful DC 17 Perception check to Sense Motive senses that Lukas isn't providing the whole story. Lukas can be convinced to divulge Grigori's vague complaints about the quality of the work in the communal bath flooring and pump room roof while simultaneously dismissing them as unfounded with a successful DC 15 Diplomacy or Intimidation check. If asked why he withheld this information in the first place, Lukas explains he didn't want the party to get the wrong idea about his company; his work is good, it is Grigori who is trying to steal from him. Lukas promises the party a 100 gp portion of the payment if they are able to successfully recover it from Grigori.

WHISPERING STREAMS

The Whispering Streams bathhouse is a single-story structure of brick and clay nestled between two canals in the upper region of the city. It serves as a popular neutral ground for rivals or business partners to meet for tense negotiations, due to the difficulty in sneaking a blade into a steam bath. Unless otherwise stated, the features of the bathhouse are as follows:

Ceilings, Walls, and Floors. Ceilings within the bathhouse are nine feet high. Internal walls are a foot thick. Many of the bathhouse's floors have been refinished with new marble, courtesy of Lukas and his son.

Doors. The bathhouse's doors are solid oak reinforced with iron bands. They have Hardness 12 and 40 Hit Points (Break Threshold 20). The bathhouse doors are unlocked, with the exception of its back entrance, which can be opened with two successful DC 15 Thievery checks or the keyring carried by Grigori, or else Forced Open loudly with a DC 20 check.

Light. A combination of wall-mounted torches and whatever sunlight filters through the bathhouse's few windows keep it well-lit during its operating hours. After the bathhouse closes for the day at approximately 10 pm, it goes dark until the next morning.

Windows. There are a few windows throughout the bathhouse. They have Hardness 2 and 10 Hit Points (Break Threshold 5). These windows cannot be opened, but, once broken, provide a space for a Medium-sized creature or smaller to climb through.

Security. During its operating hours, Grigori keeps bouncers (a bodyguard and a bounty hunter, both Pathfinder GameMastery Guide) posted at all times to ensure the safety of himself, his staff, and his patrons. One of these bodyguards is posted in the lobby (area 1, the bodyguard), and the other in its communal bathing area (area 2, the bounty hunter). When the bathhouse closes at 10 pm, a single bouncer carries a torch and patrols its interior and exterior to ward off vandals and thieves. This guard shift rotates every three hours until the bathhouse opens again at 10 am. None of the bouncers fight to the death. If reduced to one quarter of their Hit Points or fewer, they surrender.

Mephit Attendants. A steam mephit (Pathfinder Bestiary 2) who calls himself Zalmoxian the Effervescent scampers between rooms along the pipes while the bathhouse is open, making sure all the rooms are adequately steamy. He responds to requests for more or less steam but otherwise mostly ignores patrons. Another mephit stays in the pump room (area 7) to keep the boiler fed. If asked about where Grigori keeps his money, they are dismissive of that "yellow metal he hoards" and freely share that he keeps it in his locker. They don't understand coinage, being paid only in heat that rejuvenates them and free reign of the steam pipes, and can be persuaded to help take the coins in exchange for a magic item with the fire or water trait as long as the party doesn't phrase it as stealing and succeeds at a DC 15

Diplomacy or DC 13 Deception check. At night, the mephits play in the empty baths, often boiling away the water (with the helpful side effect of keeping them sterile). The mephits get annoyed at intruders upon their fun at night and try to scare off interlopers. They don't fight to the death and are under orders never to make the first strike.

The following areas are keyed to the provided map of the Whispering Streams bathhouse:

1. RECEPTION

A polished marble countertop rests opposite the entryway in this vestibule, its surface decorated with potted flowers and a visitor's log. Watercolor landscape paintings in gilded frames hang on the walls. Doors exit to the north and south.

Any guests who wish to use the facilities must check in at the front desk and record their attendance in the day's visitors log. During operating hours, in addition to the bodyguard (Pathfinder GameMastery Guide) posted near the front entrance the desk is staffed by a young man named Marek (LN he/him human servant; Pathfinder GameMastery Guide) with a clean-shaven face and bony hands that he often keeps folded in front of his chest. By default, Marek will not permit the party to enter the bathhouse with their weapons (which can be left behind his desk) or without paying the 2 sp fee for entry. He will call on the bodyguard to help him enforce these rules if necessary. If the party explains that they only wish to speak to Grigori, Marek unhelpfully claims that his boss is too busy to meet. Marek can be convinced to let the party pass with a successful DC 15 Diplomacy or Intimidation

2. SOUTH LOCKERS

A L-shaped bench extends along the west and south walls of this room. To the east is a row of wooden lockers.

Patrons can store their belongings here while they bathe. During operating hours, lockers in use are locked with a padlock, the corresponding key to which is left with Marek at the reception desk. Alternatively, these poor locks can be opened with two successful Thievery checks each. The lockers are unlikely to hold much of significant value, but three of the twelve lockers each contains a coin purse containing 1d20 gp.

3. NORTH LOCKERS

A bench and washbasin flank the east wall of this room. The north wall is occupied by a row of wooden lockers.

This room is also accessible to patrons as well, but the rightmost locker is used by Grigori. Behind its locked door, the owner keeps his emergency fund: a small iron strongbox filled with 500 gp, enough to pay back Lukas and then some. This strongbox is also locked, and can be opened with two successful DC 15 Thievery checks or with the keyring carried by Grigori.

4. COMMUNAL BATH

A large, communal pool fills the majority of this spacious chamber. The room's perimeter is lined with stone benches and discarded robes. Doors exit in all directions.

During operating hours, this main area of the bathhouse is busy with bodies and quiet conversation, overseen by one of Grigori's bouncers (a bounty hunter; Pathfinder GameMastery Guide). The bouncer firmly orders that the party disrobe before continuing through this area, regardless of whether or not reception has allowed them to proceed as-is. A successful DC 22 Diplomacy or Intimidation check is required to convince the bouncer otherwise.

Grigori the Owner. Grigori (CN he/him innkeeper with Perception +9 and Will +11; Pathfinder GameMastery Guide) is a sweaty, heavy-set man draped in jewelry. His hair is thick, dark, and tightly curled, and his eyes are beady and set deep into his face. His voice has a higher pitch than one might expect. Grigori loves getting a good deal, and fancies himself an expert businessman. He resents any implication that he does not deal fairly. Grigori is present at the bathhouse from open to close. While it is open, Grigori spends most of his time supervising the single maintenance staff member and fraternizing with the patrons in the communal area. After it closes, he makes a brief ten-minute walk alone to his house, where he lives alone. When confronted by the party, Grigori can share the following information:

- He agreed to a scope of work with Flint Ridge Masonry, including new roofing and new marble floors.
- After the work was completed, he immediately noticed serious defects with the work in the nearby baths flooring and the pump room roof (area 7).
- Grigori told Lukas that the work was shoddy, and that he would not be providing any payment until the issues could be addressed (this is partly a lie; in actuality, Grigori never clarified he would pay if the issues were addressed, he only voiced vague concerns about the quality of the work- while dodging the matter of payment).

- Lukas was obstinate, and demanded payment while refusing any claims that there was anything wrong with the work.

A character who makes a DC 17 Perception check to Sense Motive or has a Perception DC of at least 18 infers that Grigori is likely not providing the entire truth. If pressed with a successful DC 15 Diplomacy check, Grigori reluctantly admits that he was “vague” about payment, but claims he has never intended to steal from Lukas. A character who Investigates the roof in the pump room and flooring of the communal bath and who makes a successful DC 19 Crafting check can determine that though there are some defects to be found, these defects are minor, almost entirely cosmetic, and perhaps unreasonably being used as justification to withhold payment.

Adjusting the Encounter. If the party is 3rd level, increase Grigori's check modifiers and DCs each by 2 and one of the steam mephits joins in if a fight breaks out. If the party has three PCs, the influence thresholds are reduced by 1 and the bounty hunter has been drinking, making him sickened 2 (DC 15). If the party has five PCs, increase the influence thresholds by 1 and one of the steam mephits join in if a fight breaks out (both fight if the party is five 3rd-level characters).

REACHING RESOLUTION

If they choose to deal with Grigori, there are multiple ways the party can go about getting Lukas back his money. A few of these methods are described below.

Convincing Arguments. The party can convince Grigori to provide Lukas his payment through an influence encounter (Pathfinder GameMastery Guide Chapter 3: Subsystems). Grigori allows the party four 15-minute influence rounds (1 hour) to persuade him before insisting they leave so he can attend to his guests.

GRIGORI

Anxious bathhouse owner

Perception +9

Will +11

Discovery DC 11 Labor Lore or Dorran Lore, DC 16

Perception, DC 14 Society

Influence Skills DC 15 Accounting Lore (to explain how reasonable the repayment terms are), DC 15 Crafting (to repair the flaws at no extra cost with 2 days' work), DC 17 Architecture Lore or Crafting (to establish how unreasonable it is to quibble over the flaws), DC 17 Legal Lore (to convincingly threaten a lawsuit), DC 19 Diplomacy, DC 20 Deception, DC 21 Intimidation, 22 Performance (improving the bathhouse's reputation with a performance taking advantage of its good acoustics)

Influence 3: Grigori offers to pay if Lukas comes in and fix the flaws first.

Influence 4: Grigori offers to pay immediately on the condition that Lukas comes to fix the flaws afterward with no additional pay.

Influence 6: Grigori agrees to pay immediately and call the matter settled.

Resistances Physical intimidation doesn't work well. A failure result on such an Intimidation check has the outcome of a critical failure in addition to causing Grigori to summon his bounty hunter; on a second Intimidation failure, he orders his guards to throw that character out.

Weaknesses Grigori views himself as an honest businessman. If confronted with detailed analysis of how unreasonably minor the flaws in the construction are and how dishonest it is to withhold payment for work done well, if not perfectly, the character's Influence activity can't get a result worse than a success.

If the party goes back to Lukas to discuss rehabilitation work, Lukas can be convinced to complete the work in exchange for payment with a successful DC 15 Diplomacy check. Persuading him to work before getting paid requires a critical success or a similar influence encounter which they start with the same number of Influence Points they had with Grigori. Lukas is embarrassed to admit that any flaws exist and increases the DC of any check to influence him by 2 unless also softened somehow like encouraging him to think of this as a learning opportunity for his son or emphasizing how minor the flaws are. If Lukas has agreed to this rehabilitation work on condition of payment or a PC succeeds at a DC 15 Crafting check to make a quick patch, the party automatically gets 2 Influence Points with Grigori. If the party negotiated a compromise where Lukas and his son are to return to the bathhouse for repairs in exchange for their overdue compensation, any defects in the work are successfully addressed, payment is issued and both parties can move forward.

Broubeating. If the party dispatches Grigori's bodyguard, either because they swung first or because Grigori tried to throw them out after a failed intimidation check, Grigori comes to his senses and retrieves the payment from his strongbox.

Pickpocketing. While the party may be able to access Grigori's strongbox on their own, this might be easier with his keyring, which can be lifted from his pockets with a successful DC 18 Thievery check.

The party may wish to facilitate a face-to-face meeting between the two men. Doing so requires convincing each party to meet with a successful DC 18 Diplomacy check. The checks necessary to reach resolution remain the same at a face-to-face meeting, however any Influence checks other than Deception have the DC reduced by 2, as the parties find it difficult to be so obstinate when they are forced to look each other in the face.

5. PRIVATE BATHS

Single, hexagonal baths fill these smaller chambers. Benches along the north walls provide space for de-robing.

These areas can be reserved by request for privacy preferences, such as sensitive meetings. During operating hours, one or both of these rooms is likely to be occupied by patrons.

6. LAVATORY

A vanity against the north wall of this room hosts two sinks and a few instruments for personal grooming, such as brushes and soap. The south end of the room is divided into two privy stalls.

Bathhouse guests are encouraged to use this room to refresh themselves before and after their baths. For the communal pool especially, entering the water while noticeably unclean is a significant faux-pas.

7. PUMP ROOM

This small room is swelteringly hot. A pool against the far wall bubbles and steams, heated by a well-fed furnace below it. A knot of pipes controlled by a pair of valves disappears into the nearby wall, carrying the water throughout the bathhouse.

Two steam mephits (Pathfinder Bestiary 2) dwell here, feeding the furnace and ensuring all the areas of the bathhouse remain steamy. During operating hours, one remains here while the other climbs along the pipes between rooms to check for problems. They are defensive about anyone coming into their space, but don't attack anyone who convincingly claims to be guests (Deception DC 15) or employees (Deception DC 17). A character who Investigates the valves and makes a successful DC 15 Crafting check can determine the appropriate sequence to shut off any more hot water from making its way through the bathhouse.

8. STORAGE

A neat pile of folded towels as well as bundles of firewood bound together by twine are stacked against the west wall of this chamber.

Grigori uses this room for storage. There is nothing of significant value to be found here.

AFTERMATH

The aftermath of this adventure varies greatly depending on the choices made by the party. If the party was able to persuade or intimidate Gregori into providing payment, and they return that payment to Lukas, they are given their reward as promised. The party, however, may selfishly choose to keep the payment for themselves and tell Lukas they were unsuccessful. They are likely to get away with this, at least for a period of time, after which Lukas may eventually discover their betrayal. It is unlikely, however, that the man will be able to do anything about this wrongdoing. If the party recovered the funds by stealing from Grigori, the bathhouse owner may eventually send enforcers to track them down and rough them up or worse, presuming that Grigori was able to trace the theft back to the party.
