

CAVERN OF FROST GIANTS

PART 02

You are greeted by a breeze of sheer cold immediately after entering the frozen cavern. Your breath is frosty, your boots covered in snow, and your layers upon layers of warm clothing evidently are the most valuable purchase ever.

The Frost Giants, roughly 21 feet tall, seem small in comparison to the dozen towering ice crystals and a single enormous Titan's hand emerging from the cave's arctic lake. Luckily, the hand has been frozen in ice for thousands of years—truly portraying the ice's ability to memorialize the past's glory.

The Giants frown upon your arrival for a second and, as if looking at an ant, do not even consider you “worthy” enough for a second look. Who would've known that these Giants would consider themselves too mighty, and you, a human who had weathered through numerous dangers, too weak. Insulted, you grumble and swallow your pride, only to carry on your mission of opening up negotiations in the hope of returning the fallen crest of your benefactor from these barbarians.
