

Sun God Temple by Tom Cartos

Background

Rather than being dedicated to any specific named deity, the acolytes of this temple worship the Sun as a God itself and give thanks for the warmth and light it bestows upon the world. This worship is primarily carried out through simple tasks, such as meditation, gardening and sunbathing, that promote inner thought and tranquillity.

Visitors are always welcome, providing they take care not to disturb the peace, and they are encouraged to join in with the day's activities. Many speak of a feeling of deep restfulness after a visit to the temple, just be certain not to visit during a solar eclipse!
