The runerite's halls are filled with the tinks and clinks of metal on stone. Each with their own purpose, no strike is to be wasted. The power to imbue the stones with magical glyphs to be used in times most needed is an opportunity to those that know how to listen to the stones, but as useless as a boulder to those that don't speak their language.
You gain a +2 item bonus to Crafting checks related to stonemasonry. Additionally, you gain a +1 item bonus when you attempt to Recall Knowledge about anything related to stone.
During your daily preparations, you can use this chisel to carve runes in up to 3 mundane stones and infuse them with magic turning them into Runerite Stones. The stones gain the Divination and Magical traits. Anyone can use a Runerite Stone you give to them so long as they know how to speak the rune carved in it.
Activate ♦ command; Effect You speak the rune on the stone and it crumbles to dust infusing you with its magics, which grants you a +2 item bonus to the first skill check you attempt within 1 minute.
