CLEAVERTAIL	ITEM 10
EVOCATION INVESTED MAGICAL Price 900 gp Usage worn backpack; Bulk 2 While this mechanism was originally mounted to a Drudgework Cleaver, it's obvious that a resourceful individual has repurposed the hopper and tail to be a usable backpack for the adventurer on the go. The tail is made of an especially hard metal and is controllable by the wearer of the pack. While it functions like a normal backpack, it has much more to offer for those that strap it to themselves. While invested in this backpack, you can use the tail to propel you along while swimming. You gain a +10-foot item bonus to the distance you move when rolling Athletics to Swim. When found, this backpack has a grease keg strapped to the top of it. If the keg is launched using the tail, it explodes at the location it was launched toward causing the same effects as a grease snare in that area. Replacement kegs are uncommon and cost 30 gp. Activate ♦♦ Interact; Frequency once per hour; Effect You kneel and place an object or willing creature weighing no more than 150 lbs on the tail of the backpack, then fling it toward a space of your choosing within 60 ft of you. If the target is a creature, that creature takes 4d12 bludgeoning damage (DC 27 basic Reflex saving throw).	CLEAVERTAIL
