TYPE: SHIELD
RARIETY: RARE

What looks to have once been a hanging chandelier, has been ripped from whatever mechanism had previously kept it aloft. Now, a leather strap has been attached to the back turning this object into a makeshift shield that is constantly pouring light from it. When held, illusory wax drips from it, but disappears shortly after coming into contact with another surface. It seems the chandelier has been enchanted with some form of everburning magic to keep the appearance of fire where there is none.

When you are wielding this shield, it shines bright light for 30 feet and dim light for an additional 30 feet beyond that. You can use one action to speak a command word to douse the flames or to reignite them.

Twice per day, when you are hit, but not critically hit by a melee weapon attack, you can use your reaction to cause wax to pour from the shield and attempt to ensnarl the weapon that struck you. Make a contested Strength (Athletics) check against the creature that struck you. You have a +1 bonus on this check due to the sticky nature of the wax. On a success, you rip the weapon from their hand, leaving it stuck in the wax of the shield. Uses of this ability reset daily at dawn.
