

Clone Inspection

Written by: FA User elliot-bloodcraft

Knowing what needed to be done and set in motion was simple, it was part of his programming for how he was created. Zane was the hybrid between Terran and an Alien, born in a lab himself and given the disposition to be a force of conquest. Having a highly strategic and evolved mind made it almost simplistic with what he knew he was going to do.

Clone and make a force of look-alike individuals to gather information and sow discord on planets that he had ambitions to invade.

Having the ability to blend in as an earthling it was simple to gather genetic samples was also trivial, sleeping with a myriad of men he was able to procure sperm from prime studs.

Returning to his seed-ship he deposited the harvested seed into his genetic vault. Zane's technology he intended to use was a combination of technology and organic bio-engineering. The sperm or genetic material would be input into a terminal system, it would be analyzed and then replicated into a copy of the individual he harvested it from. The created lifeform would then be 'piped' through a system of organic vines and deposited in a sac in a large atrium, almost similar to a greenhouse.

The first lifeforms he chose to harvest were from two terrestrial Ursine, one of a panda, one of a seemingly regular bear. Bringing the genes back to his lair he began the process with the intent to splice them with his own genome. Both of the clones were deposited into their respective pods. The panda having a much simpler genetic make-up he quickly grew to full and floated peacefully within the sac. The other bear took longer time to grow but still within the first few moments after being deposited.

The pod peeled open with a loud squelch as the panda knowingly stepped out, his body toned and coated in ichor, antennae unfurling as he looked to his 'creator' who had entered the room. Knowing innately what was expected, he went over to the other nascent pod with the other bear clone inside it, leaning against it and raising his legs as Zane approached, having no need for clothes in his own lair he was already naked. The fucking was quick, efficient, but not without passion. The clone's goal was to seem as close to normal as possible, but with a cold and calculating alien mind beneath the earthling exterior. Zane was too taken in by analyzing in a sexual manner of the panda to have noticed that the other clone was awoken, and enjoying the spectacle of alien sex in front of him. Soon more would join their ranks...