

Yui's Solution

(to everything)

Video games are often very effective at passing time. Yui has always enjoyed gaming, but she mostly enjoyed it when her boyfriend, Henry was around. The longer she played, the more often her attention was pulled away to the fact he was late coming home from work.

Just as she was about to get home and give him a call, the door swung open. Henry, late home again this week, walked right past his beaming girlfriend as she greeted him at the door.

Sighing as he sat down, Yui put down her controller and looked on with concern. More and more had Henry been coming home exhausted, irritable and mostly unmotivated to do much outside of vegging out on the couch.

"Hey you... you think you can get by me and not give me a kiss when you get home?" Yui said, crawling across the couch.

Smooch

While he clearly enjoyed their embrace, he slumped over even harder. Today was different, Yui could tell. She didn't need her heightened senses to know that Henry's day was worse than usual. "What's the matter?" she asked.

Henry went on about his day. He spoke about his boss, his coworkers, the insane amount of work he had to get done, and continued to pile on all the negative things his current employer was putting him through.

"Ok Henry. I've heard enough." Yui said, snapping Henry out of his funk. "So your job isn't that fun, but don't forget that no matter how much paper you must push, you get to come home to something nobody else has."

Henry, clearly still exhausted and put off about his work, followed her, with his eyes, as she stood up from the couch, continuing on about the hardships of his job. Yui's face curled into a smile as she knew how to turn his mood around, real fast.

Henry trailed off as his girlfriend's body started to expand. Her thighs, glorious as ever, took up his line of vision quickly. He had stopped mid sentence as the weight of his day evaporated with every inch she grew.

"That's more like it." Yui said, getting more comfortable.

Henry, taking in his girlfriend's new stature, finally found some words.
"You know I love it when you grow babe... but how is this..."

"No more of that!" Yui said, dropping her sweater on him.

"You must have really had a bad day if you are still thinking about work. I guess I need to make a little room to really get your mind off all that nonsense." Yui said, expanding again, this time having to temporarily redecorate.

The white tailed girl was quickly taking up more space in their room.

The roof was reminding her that they are in fact, inside. This only served to spurn on her next idea.

"No more talking about work. I've heard enough. This time I think we should do something about what is having my Henry come home so tired and upset all the time..."
Yui said, stopping her man from speaking another word.

Henry felt her soft finger on his lips, and was left wondering what exactly she intended to do that could have any impact on his working situation...
