

-Is it awkward having two heads? How did your friends react to it after you first mutated, or new people you met who didn't know you have two heads?

J: It can be awkward for other people that talk to me and don't know which head they should look at, haha! For me it's just fun and it feels great. Having an extra head, even with just two arms, can be super useful sometimes and I don't miss the days where I only had one.

People who didn't know me when I had a single head aren't shocked when they see me, since we're in Port Solei after all. I'm probably not the first two headed mutant they saw in their lives so in most cases it's a good reaction. However, with the people that knew me before my mutation it was a really big surprise; All of them took it well tho and asked a bunch of questions hehe!

-Have you ever thought about marriage?

J: I must admit I've thought about it multiple times. However, I find it hard to imagine myself getting married, starting a family and being a mom. It would be too 'slow' a life for me, but fate has many surprises in store, so... who knows?

-Isn't it hard to have three breasts but only two hands?

J: Hahaha... damn, it really is. I wouldn't complain about having an extra pair of hands, but at the same time my mutation has given me a whole extra head, so that's pretty cool by itself don't you think? Besides, not having enough hands gives me an excuse to ask for 'help' hehe ;)

-When people mistake you for two people, do you ever joke and play along?

J: Haha! It's a joke that never gets old, but it always depends on the situation. I meet a lot of new people in my salon but I have to be professional and direct with my clients from the beginning, so I can't make those kinds of jokes. If it happens in a restaurant, I like to play around with it a bit, after all it doesn't matter if they take me as two clients or one. If it happens in a private setting with someone, well... It depends on the preferences of whoever I'm with, and I don't mind acting as two people if necessary. A little roleplay never hurts ;) ;)

-How was life before you grew your second head? How did your three breasts affect your life?

J: My life before I had my second head wasn't as different as you might think. I was already doing the same thing I do now and was preparing to have my own salon. If I could describe what it was like, I'd say it was harder to do everything I do today. I guess a second brain makes quite a difference haha!

As for my breasts, I was born this way so I'm not quite sure how it is having just two. Let's just say that in my school years I gained a little extra popularity because I was the only one in the classroom with a mutation. But other than that, my life wasn't any more special for having three breasts, except for the custom dresses and bras I had to buy.

-Do you ever wish that your mutation had changed either more or fewer things about your body? For example, have you ever felt like another pair of arms would be useful when giving people haircuts? As a follow-up question, have you ever experimented with mutagen before?

J: Ha! I think I've answered this in a previous question. But yes... an extra pair of arms would be great to go with my extra head, though I know very well that it comes with some drawbacks and a lot of practice to do. Let's just say I wouldn't complain if I mutated to have them but I'm also very happy with my current body.

As for the mutagen, I've tried it once when Sophie and Lucy brought some back from Access' lab (I hope telling this doesn't get them into trouble). It's a pretty bizarre experience, not only because your body changes suddenly and involuntarily like a spontaneous mutation, but then you have to deal with going back to normal and for a while you feel like 'something' is missing. Besides that, it's fun, sexy and a crazy experience. In my case, I turned into a humantaur with a penis and a nice tail... Now that I think about it, I was pretty similar to Maeve, just that my two heads were different kinds of heads hehe.

-What kind of new mutation would you like to experience?

J: Extra legs and penises are something I could already cross off the list thanks to that experience with the mutagen, so that leaves me wanting to try extra arms and maybe some fusion, even if it's only temporary... I'm really curious to know how it feels to share your body with someone else. Any volunteers? ;) ;)

-Have you ever daydreamed about sucking Maeve's dicks?

J: Absolutely. I'd tell you all to keep it a secret but I don't mind her knowing. Let's face it, I don't think anyone who sees someone with two penises and another person with two heads wouldn't put the puzzle pieces together haha! I think next time I see her I'll mention it, how do you think she'd react?

-Is it true that when you sleep your heads are independent? Let me explain, can you be asleep with only one head, while the other is awake? And if so, can you "see" what the sleeping head dreams about with the awake one?

J: Yes, that's right. My heads are independent when it comes to sleeping but like any mutant with more than one head, we need them all to be sleeping in order to really rest, so staying awake with one isn't something I usually do. Still, I can do it as long as I don't make sudden movements or overstimulate my mind too much. After all, my sleeping head still perceives and receives some information from my awake head.

Which brings me to your second question: Yes, I can see my dreams with the head I keep awake. Although it is something very strange to describe... You can imagine it like watching a movie in pieces and under the effects of a hallucinogen, or at least that's how I perceive it from my awake head. The memory of the dream in the sleeping head is much clearer and realistic, at least for the time that it stays in my memory. Strange, don't you think? I don't really know why... I suppose that my brains, like everyone's, considerably decrease their functioning when resting and in my case that affects my connection between the two.

However, I'm not an expert in mutant biology so I can't say for sure. In fact, talking about this is giving me a double headache, and that's what I want to avoid the most. So, next question haha!

- Have you ever pretended to be two different people? How good are you at it? Do you find it difficult to separate the "personalities" in each head? In what situations would you do something like that?

J: I answered a lot of this in a previous question, but yes... I can pretend to be two people and I have done it a few times! I usually do it at parties or even amongst my friends for a bit of fun. Believe me, when you have two heads doing that is a lot easier than it sounds, I just have to make sure to respond to what one of my heads says with the other so the scene is believable enough. That said, I'm not that good at pretending to have different personalities with each one, in fact I'm terrible at mimicking other personalities other than my own in general.

- Your three breasts are very exotic, but I imagine it must not be easy to find clothes or enhance two necklines. How do you do it? Could you show us a selection of your favorite necklines one day?

J: Do you think they're exotic? Thank you very much! In terms of clothes it would've been difficult to get suitable clothes elsewhere, but luckily there are many shops in this city specialized in mutant clothing and dresses for three breasted mutants are quite popular. I must admit that in a way I like the way a double cleavage looks since it gives a bit more elegance and sensuality. Maybe one day I'll show you my collection of Undine underwear. They're by far my favorites, though I think my three breasts look better without them ;) ;)

-There's a pic where you're looking both Sophie and Lucy in the eyes - what's it like locking eyes with two people like that?

J: It's super cool! I can tell from their expressions that they are clearly two totally different people, and being able to talk to both of them and see both of their expressions in detail at the same time is a perk I love about my mutation. Although, when it comes to talking it's pretty relative. They're so close that it's hard to have two conversations at the same time and still be able to hear them both clearly. It's like having two radios on at the same time; Even when I can process things in two different heads, it is impossible for me to not hear with my right head what my left head is saying, so in most cases we just talk about the same topic altogether.

-If it's okay to ask...How often do you think about Maeve's lengths?

J: In her presence? Practically never... I respect her a lot and she is a precious friend. I may be a bit perverted but I have my codes...most of the time, haha...!

Now, when I'm alone at home... That's another story entirely. I like to think of penises in general when I'm imagining lewd scenarios, though many of those times those penises are two and belong to a humantaur girl. It could be an absolute coincidence, right? I hope that answers the question 😊 😊

-How often do you game in your free time, and do you enjoy fast-paced or rts games?

Quite often. That's something we all have in common in our group of girls, and we're taking Maeve down the same path hehe.

As for categories, I like RTS in general. Are you referring to any in particular? Age of Empires? Starcraft? Warcraft? Command & Conquer? Warhammer? I've tried all of those!

-Ever since you first started your job, have you ever made a mistake with cutting hair?

Everyone who does this same job has made mistakes at some point. It's part of learning and becoming a professional. Luckily, most mistakes that happen have some kind of solution. Did your hair not end up the color you wanted? You can dye it again. Was the cut not what you wanted and is now too short? You can put in extensions.

Obviously, I do my best to avoid these kinds of mistakes and luckily, I practically never make them these days. It's also very important to have good communication with the client and understand well what they want to prevent this from happening.

-Birthday date?

My birthday is on July 2nd. I usually celebrate it with my friends at a restaurant, if you want to visit me on that day you are welcome :) :)
