

Medusa Lair by Tom Cartos

Background

This temple has stood watch overlooking the ocean for hundreds of years and has served several gods and their worshippers in that time. Now however it has been abandoned, instead becoming home to an ever-growing collection of incredibly lifelike statues.

The temple is far enough from civilization that few come across it by mistake, but the caverns and inlets in the cliff face below are occasionally used by seafarers looking to avoid an incoming storm. If you find yourself in such a circumstance, do not be tempted to wander and explore the ruins above!
