

You saw your hypnotist's fingers moving, out of the corner of your eyes. A slow, wiggling motion, that caught your attention. They hadn't said a word, they were just letting the YouTube video continue to play. But the noise of that faded into the background.

They raised their hand, the fingers still making that motion, still holding your attention. Your eyelids fluttered a little more with every downward motion a finger made. You could see their smile, in your peripheral vision. The way their eyes had locked onto you.

You felt like you were trapped, caught in a snare, unable to get away, as their fingers kept moving, kept drawing you in, deeper and deeper. Your mind was stumbling, your thoughts tripping over one another, until, finally, with one last motion, their whole hand moved downward.
